

College of International Security Affairs
National Defense University

Dr. Arabinda Acharya
Professor
Department of International Security Studies

Education

- Ph.D., Deakin University: International Relations
- M.S., Nanyang Technological University: Strategic Studies
- M.A., India: Political Science
- B.A., India: Law

Research Interests

- Regionalism
- Human Security
- Political Violence
- Terrorism

Professor Arabinda Acharya was until recently Research Fellow and Head of Strategic Projects at the International Centre for Political Violence and Terrorism Research in the S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore. He holds a Master of Arts in Political Science (India), a Master of Science in Strategic Studies (Nanyang Technological University, Singapore), a Bachelor of Law (India), and a Ph.D. in International Relations from Deakin University, Australia.

His research interests are Regionalism, Human Security, Political Violence, and Terrorism. Arabinda is listed in the United Nations Alliance of Civilizations' Roster of Experts for expertise on regionalism, human security and terrorism. He is author or co-author of Ten Years after 9/11—Rethinking the Jihadist Threat (Routledge, 2013); The Terrorist Threat from Thailand: Jihad or Quest for Justice (Potomac Books Inc, 2013); Ethnic Identity and National Conflict in China (Palgrave Macmillan, 2010); and Targeting Terrorist Financing: International Cooperation and New Regimes (Routledge, 2009). He has also published extensively in many reputed journals, including Washington Quarterly, Studies in Conflict and Terrorism, and Journal of Money Laundering Control.