ANDREW R. NOVO is assistant professor of international security studies. He studied classics at Princeton University before getting a master’s degree in international relations and a PhD in modern history from St. Antony’s College, the University of Oxford. Dr. Novo has also taught at Georgetown and lectured at the University of Cyprus and the United States Military Academy at West Point. His research interests include ancient and modern Mediterranean history, grand strategy, American foreign policy, and military history. He has published two books, When Small Countries Crash (2011) detailing financial crises in small economies and Queen of Cities (2010), a historical novel on the fall of Constantinople.